Product Description

DESCRIPTION

Steel strips have become an ideal choice for packaging due to their strong ductility, tensile resistance, and fracture resistance. This material is hot-dip galvanized and has undergone special treatment, which has the advantages of durability and rust prevention. The ductility of steel strips enables them to exhibit good flexibility and deformation under external forces. It also adopts special rust prevention treatment technology, effectively resisting the erosion of environmental factors such as moisture and oxidation, greatly extending its service life. It can be used to secure and bundle various goods, providing stable and reliable packaging effects for heavy and light items. At the same time, its lightweight and easy to operate characteristics make the packaging process simpler and faster, improving work efficiency.
