Product Description

Hot dip galvanized locking buckle

Packaging buckle is a product widely used in industries such as packaging, logistics, and manufacturing. It is mainly used for steel strips to ensure the stability and safety of goods during transportation and storage. The packaging buckle has high connection strength and impact resistance, and is usually made of high-strength materials, which can withstand large tensile and impact forces and is not easy to break or deform. The surface of the packaging buckle is hot-dip galvanized, which can improve its surface hardness and wear resistance, thereby extending its service life. At the same time, its strength reaches Rm400MPa, demonstrating extremely high tensile strength and impact resistance, ensuring that it can withstand large external forces during the packaging process without being easily damaged.

When using a 19mm wide hot-dip galvanized steel strip, it can be suitable for manual packaging machines, which can save energy. When paired with a 19mm wide baked blue and painted steel strip, it can be used in pneumatic packaging machines. When used in conjunction with pneumatic packaging machines, this type of packaging buckle can achieve fast and reliable packaging operations.
